

PA POSTCARD

Bonjour!

I am a 'former' management assistant who, nine years ago, changed to become a training consultant after having worked for 25 years in different firms.

I have therefore been able to experience all the technological developments that have so thoroughly changed what the job used to be.

It is quite by chance that I became an assistant (when we were still called 'secretaries').

I truly enjoyed and still enjoy this wonderful job. I have been given the opportunity to appreciate the richness of the various tasks and the intensity of human relationships that make up this job, like adapting to the various contexts within the company but also to the individuals and being involved in strategic actions.

I also have experience of organising and communicating, taking part and helping in the making of decisions as well as many responsibilities that will keep this job going.

It is also a real pleasure to reach an international development and to communicate in foreign languages with clients and partners.

There is only one piece of advice I wish to give: training programmes for assistants are in the forefront of companies' needs, so become an assistant!
